

University of Lagos (UNILAG)

Lagos University Teaching Hospital (LUTH), Lagos, Nigeria

About the Site

Lagos University Teaching Hospital (LUTH) is one of West Africa's largest and most respected tertiary healthcare institutions. Affiliated with the University of Lagos, LUTH provides comprehensive healthcare services while serving as a major training center for healthcare professionals.

Students gain exposure to advanced hospital pharmacy practice across outpatient, inpatient, emergency, pediatric, ophthalmic, intensive care, and specialty service areas.

Student Experience

During the five-week rotation, students work alongside pharmacists and multidisciplinary healthcare teams while participating in medication therapy management, medication history collection, pharmaceutical care planning, patient counseling, clinical case evaluations, prescription review, and extemporaneous compounding.

The experience culminates in clinical case presentations and evidence-based discussions that strengthen clinical reasoning and professional communication skills.

Highlights

- Large tertiary-care teaching hospital
- Direct patient care experiences
- Clinical case development and presentations
- Medication therapy management training
- Advanced hospital pharmacy practice exposure